Local businesses contributed $54,750 to the Challenge Program Inc. to support the program's efforts to motivate and reward students in Washington County high schools during the 2016-17 program year. Through the Challenge Program, sophomores, juniors and seniors are introduced to careers in their own communities and challenged to compete in five award categories that are directly linked with academic and work-force success: attendance, STEM, academic improvement, academic excellence and community service. Additionally, businesses engaged students in various work-related activities, such as facility tours and job-shadowing. Participating Washington County businesses and their partner schools are Range Resources - Avella, Bentworth, Burgettstown, Chartiers-Houston and Fort Cherry High schools and Western Area Career and Technology Center; Auma Actuators - Canon-McMillan High School; Progeny Systems - Charleroi Area and Belle Vernon High schools; MarkWest - Chartiers-Houston and Fort Cherry High schools; Noble Energy - Ringold High School; Dynamet Inc. - Washington High School; Wesbanco - Trinity High School; and Alex E. Paris Contracting - Avella High School. Participating in the presentation are, front row, from left, Christina Kramer of Range Resources; Dan Perkins, founder of the Challenge Program; and Mary DeProspero-Adams of Western Area Career and Technology Center; and back row, Tia Bums of Trinity High School; Jamie Ciesielski of AUMA Actuators Inc.; Emmeline Powers of Dynamet, Inc.; Kristy Budavich of MarkWest Energy Partners; and Maria Campieri, program development manager of the Challenge Program.

First National Bank of Pennsylvania recently presented the Community Foundation of Greene County with a contribution of $3,000. The money can be used toward grants for Greene County public schools as part of the Educational Improvement Tax Credit program. Since 2005, the community foundation has provided grants for innovative curriculum improvement in each of the five Greene County school districts for projects such as Artist-in-Residence programs, STEM curriculum and equipment, robotics programs and EMT certification curriculum. Through the EITC program, administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development, a business can receive a tax credit for contributions to approved organizations, such as CFGC, to support Educational Improvement projects in public schools, or provide scholarships for students to attend private kindergarten through 12th grade schools or prekindergarten programs. Sheila Stewart, manager of First National Bank's Waynesburg office, left, presented the check to Bettie Stammerjohn, executive director of the Community Foundation of Greene County.

The Foster Grandparent Program recently held its annual Recognition Luncheon at the Hilton Garden Inn at Southpointe. Connie Sadler of Charleroi, left, received a Certificate of Recognition for completing 10 years of service with the program. Joanne Loera of Rostraver Township received a Certificate of Recognition for completing five years of service and her 2017 retirement. State Sen. Camera Bartolotta, R-Carroll Township, signed the certificates. Other 2017 retirees include: Ada Adkins, Joyce Catt, Gladys (Betty) Brooks, Aldina Cialone, Carolyn Browder, Helen Crowley, Helen Hart, Lorraine Whalen, Dolores Zihar, Frances Myron, Geraldine Fleming, Irene Grimes and Celestine Harris.

State Police Youth Week, sponsored by the American Legion Department of Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania State Police, was held June 11-17 at York College. Cadets participated in a variety of instructional sessions with local, state and federal law enforcement officials. Subjects addressed included Pennsylvania vehicle and crime codes, forensic sciences, radar, riot control, tactical drug operation through the use of specially trained dogs and weapons. Local participants included, from left, Master Sgt. Don Bailey, Young Marine PFC Logan Dawso, Young Marine Sgt. Noah Davis, Young Marine PFC Kaylene Willard and Washington County Commissioner Larry Maggi, the camp's director.

A STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts, and Math) summer camp was held at John F. Kennedy Catholic School for local middle school students in June. This theme - "What About Microbes!" - allowed the children to explore the world of microbiology through various interdisciplinary experiences such as hands-on scientific discovery, microscopy, and robotics. Computer applications were incorporated to help them communicate their findings. For more information, visit www.whataboutsteam.com.

Canon-McMillan boys under-13 travel squad recently won the Silver Division championship at the 2017 Pennsylvania West Open Soccer Tournament. Members of the team are, front, Brandon Pernisek; first row, from left, Tanner Pilarski, Anthony Bellino, Dylan Harmon, Wyatt Telfor, Jonathan Pernisek and Perry Bamhart; second row, Jeremy Michrina, Logan McLain, Kaden Higgins, Paul John Barzd, Zachary O'Rourke, Seth Wudkwych, John King and Martin Hares; and third row, coach Tom McConnell and assistant coach Tom Bellino.
